

Compare/Contrast F45 I / Anthem

Compare...

Topic Sentence

Both Montag in Fahrenheit 451 and Equality in Anthem begin their stories unaware of how evil their respective societies are.

Both Montag in Fahrenheit 451 and Equality in Anthem begin their stories unaware of how evil their respective societies are. In the first pages of F451, Montag thoroughly enjoys the destructive power of burning books. “It was a special pleasure to see things eaten, to see things blackened and changed.”

Set-up

Both Montag in Fahrenheit 451 and Equality in Anthem begin their stories unaware of how evil their respective societies are. In the first pages of F451, Montag thoroughly enjoys the destructive power of burning books. “It was a special pleasure to see things eaten, to see things blackened and changed.”

Both Montag in Fahrenheit 451 and Equality in Anthem begin their stories unaware of how evil their respective societies are. In the first pages of F451, Montag thoroughly enjoys the destructive power of burning books. “It was a special pleasure to see things eaten, to see things blackened and changed.” (3)

Quote Evidence

Set-up

Both Montag in Fahrenheit 451 and Equality in Anthem begin their stories unaware of how evil their respective societies are. In the first pages of F451, Montag thoroughly enjoys the destructive power of burning books. “It was a special pleasure to see things eaten, to see things blackened and changed.” (3) Similarly, Equality feels ashamed when he thinks about what work he wants to do. “We were guilty and we confess it here: we were guilty of the great Transgression of Preference. We preferred some work and lessons to others.” (22)

Both Montag in Fahrenheit 451 and Equality in Anthem begin their stories unaware of how evil their respective societies are. In the first pages of F451, Montag thoroughly enjoys the destructive power of burning books. “It was a special pleasure to see things eaten, to see things blackened and changed.” (3) Similarly, Equality feels ashamed when he thinks about what work he wants to do. “We were guilty and we confess it here: we were guilty of the great Transgression of Preference. We preferred some work and lessons to others.” (22)

Quote Evidence

Both Montag in Fahrenheit 451 and Equality in Anthem begin their stories unaware of how evil their respective societies are. In the first pages of F451, Montag thoroughly enjoys the destructive power of burning books. “It was a special pleasure to see things eaten, to see things blackened and changed.” (3) Similarly, Equality feels ashamed when he thinks about what work he wants to do. “We were guilty and we confess it here: we were guilty of the great Transgression of Preference. We preferred some work and lessons to others.” (22) Both protagonists begin their stories in this way to show how a typical citizen in these dystopias feels and acts. This could be so that the reader will realize how oppressive these societies are and so that when they rebel, their enlightenment will seem more impressive. The protagonists needed to completely separate themselves from the values and rules of their societies in order to fight back and champion a better world.

Reflection

Block Quotes (more than 3 lines)

4 paragraphs:
2 compare, 2 contrast